

Hudson Farmers Market Helping to Grow Entrepreneurs

Published: June 12, 2015 1:05PM

Hudson Farmers Market is providing a fertile environment for young entrepreneurs to learn business skills. On Saturday, June 13 students from Cuyahoga Valley Christian Academy will be at the market selling popcorn, pretzels, slushies, and products from Rawanda.

The students are part of a new initiative called The Young Entrepreneur Market (YEM), which was launched by the Young Entrepreneur Institute at University School last year. YEM gives high school and middle school entrepreneurs the opportunity to get real-world experience working with customers. The program is funded by The Burton D. Morgan Foundation and The Veale Foundation.

YEM participants will be at Hudson Farmers Market on July 11 and August 15.

Hudson Farmers Market is sponsored by Hudson Montessori School. Hudson Montessori, which educates students in preschool through 8th grade, provides an environment that helps its students develop a true sense of community. Young entrepreneurs from the school also will be visiting this season.

For more information about Hudson Farmers Market, visit www.hudsonfarmersmarket.org. Follow the market on Facebook and Twitter. Contact Audrey Hylton, market manager, by email at ahylton@hudsonfarmersmarket.org, or by phone at 330-476-9436.

